The name of black cocks (Mauricio Diaz Varela, home producer based in Spain) is original from a song of my other past punk project, so i took the name because i always want to be punk, punk is always in my attitude. I try to put all my creativity and experimentation with sounds and production techniques to this warm sounds, and I feel my music influenced by ambient, noise and concrete music, but I really want to recreate the old sound in my tracks. I really really don't like put any tag for my music because i'm open to experimentation. What i want to make feel with my music is warm/lo-fi dark experimentation. I always try to describe my inspirations for each track inspirations form my partner photography's and form the beat generation and form Japanese science fiction from 60`s.
