The canadian psycho folk singer Dora Bleu performs with russian electro acoustic artists Alexei Borisov and Olga Nosova on a special live concert on August 24, 2009 at Genialistude Klubi in Tartu (Estonia), where songs follow their own inner sense of narrative time. The songs follow their own inner sense of narrative time. The guitar playing is sparse, tense, suggestively melodic, sometimes dissonant. The vocals contribute to uneven compositions filled with stark silences. The songs intend to violate the concept of genre, to infuse storytelling and text with trauma, vulnerability and the raw and unprotected and intensely emotional. The lyrics explore the darker caverns of the psyche, in the places of experience where the capitalist war state replenishes itself.

"we are the midwives of each other we are magicians that change one another we are the thoughts that create from the other we are the thoughts that escape from the other"
